PREFACE.

PREFACE.

THE following publication, it is presumed, will be neither useless nor uninteresting to the Members of the University. That something of the kind has been long wanting appears from the general approbation which was expressed at the first intimation of such an attempt. Hitherto the Public has not sufficiently been made acquainted with the emoluments to be obtained at the several Colleges; the principal object therefore of the CAMBRIDGE CALENDAR is to supply this defect, by stating the Number of the Fellowships, Scholarships and Exhibitions at each, with their respective Endowments; to render which complete, a List of the Livings belonging to each College is added, the Values of which are taken from Bacon's Thesaurus. The greater part of the Work was printed off some months ago, and the whole intended to have been published last October, but owing

owing to the extreme difficulty in procuring an accurate account of the different Appropriations, has unavoidably been delayed to the present time, on which account it will appear that the Lists of the Members which were taken from the College boards previous to that period, will be somewhat incorrect. In the first attempt of a Work of this nature, perfection cannot be expected, but the Public may rely, (should it meet with general approbation and encouragement) no pains or expence shall be wanting to render it another year more complete and worthy their future favor and attention. Many acknowledgements are due to those Gentlemen who have obligingly furnished much information towards the advancement of the CAMBRIDGE CALENDAR.

25th JAN. 1796.

PETER-

ORIGIN OF THE UNIVERSITY.

THE origin of Cambridge as an University is very doubtful. We are however informed that one Cantaber, a Spaniard, about 370 years before Christ, is intitled to this honour: Certain it is, that after many years laying desolate, Sigebert, king of the East Angles, restored it A. D. 630. Henry I. received his education from Cambridge in 1080, who, from the proficiency he made during his residence here, acquired the appellation of the Good Scholar (Beauclerc). About a century after this period, Leoffred, abbot of Crowland, sent from his manor of Cottenham daily, Gislebert and three others of his fellow monks, to Cambridge, who hired a public barn for their lectures, but in the second year their scholars increased so rapidly, that they were obliged to have separate apartments. No provision having as yet been made for the accommodation of the students, who still hired halls or hotels for their disputations and exercises, the infant state of the university received considerable checks from the exactions of the townsmen, whose houses they were under the necessity of lodging in; at length Hugh Balsham, sub-prior, (after bishop of Ely,) founded the first college, in the year 1257, 41st of Henry III. which, from its vicinity to St. Peter's church, obtained the name of St. PETER's COLLEGE, which he endowed, in the year 1282, 11th of Edward I. with maintenance for a master, 14 fellows, 2 bible clerks, and 8 poor scholars, and by will bequeathed 300 marks (200l.) to build a hall.

CLARE HALL*.

LADY Elizabeth, sister and co-heir of Gilbert, earl of Clare, wife of John de Burghe, lord of Connaught of Ireland, and mother of William de Burghe, last earl of Ulster, built this college at her own expence, and endowed it with lands, for the maintenance of a master, 10 fellows, and 10 scholars, in the year 1347, 35 Ed. III. on the scite of the university hall, founded 20 years before by Richard Badew or Badow, of Great Badow, near Chelmsford in Essex, chancellor of Cambridge university, which was reduced to ashes by fire.

* Clare Hall, according to Dr. Caius, was also called Solere Hall, which is most likely a corruption of Scholar's Hall.

MARY de Saint Paul, daughter of Guido de Chastillion earl of Saint Paul in France, and of Mary, daughter of John earl of Richmond, and of Beatrice daughter of Edward III. king of England, baronness of Voisser and Mountenai, and third wife of Andomair de Valencia earl of Pembroke, who was made a widow on the day of her marriage, her husband being killed in tilting on his wedding-day; upon which melancholy event, she retired from the delights of the world, and devoted herself and estates to pious purposes, among the principal of which was the foundation of the college of Maria de Valencia, commonly called Pembroke Hall, in the year 1343, and 18 of Edward III. She survived her husband 42 years. Denny Abbey, in Cambridgeshire, was also founded by her. She obtained a charter of incorporation from Edward III. for 24 fellows and 6 scholar-ships, but only 6 of the former and 2 of the latter were founded by her.

THE COLLEGE OF CORPUS CHRISTI
AND THE B. VIRGIN MARY,

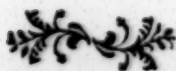

(VULGO)

BENE'T COLLEGE.

THIS College was founded in a different manner from any other in either of the universities: viz. by two societies, Gilda Corporis Christi and Gilda Beatæ Mariæ Virginis, i. e. the Gild of the Body of Christ, and the Gild of the Blessed Virgin Mary. The word gild or guild is derived from the Saxon, and signifies any joint society or incorporated body: These gilds were anciently a company associated for religious or mercantile purposes, and, from the derivation of the word, are supposed to have had their origin in Saxony, though there were several of them also among the Franks, Germans and other northern nations.—They consisted of both sexes, and of all ranks, and at their admission contributed to the association in proportion to their circumstances. Three annual annual officers governed these societies; an alderman, who was the principal, and the other two treasurers: They had also a body of statutes that on admission they were sworn to observe. But to return to the two gilds of Cambridge. They, at several periods, obtained from Edward III. licenses for holding lands in Mortmain, in the desire for which there was much emulation, but Corpus Christi Gild considerably outstripped her sister in endowments. The society of St. Mary's Gild observing this, requested an union, which was as readily consented to by the former, as the latter held considerable lands in mortmain. Thus united by the mutual consent of both parties, an instrument was obtained from the king, through the mediation of Henry duke of Lancaster, their mutual friend and patron, empowering them not only to found their college, but likewise considerably to increase it's revenues. This nobleman, who was afterwards solicited to become their guardian, was only son of Henry earl of Lancaster, second son of Edmund surnamed Crouchback, younger son of Henry III. and was born at Grismond castle in the county of Monmouth. He is generally deemed the founder of this new-united society, but no considerable siderable bounty was conferred on it by him. The manor of Barton was bought of, and not conferred by him on, the members of this society. The college was founded under the name of the college of Corpus Christi and of the Blessed Virgin Mary, after the two guilds, and is now more commonly known by the name of Bene't College, from its vicinity to St. Bene't's church.—In consequence of the above-mentioned license, the aldermen and brethren transferred their premises to Thomas de Eltille, who was the first master; Sir John Rayfoun of Fulbourn, and Sir Thomas Caumpes, the two first, and, at that time, the only fellows, (the society revenues not being sufficient to maintain any more): to be held by them and their successors for ever, by an instrument bearing date St. Benedict's day 1353, and 27th of Edward III.

TRINITY HALL.

TRINITY HALL was an hotel for the entertainment of students long before any colleges were erected, and was enlarged by Richard Ling, alias Herling, chancellor of the University, Walter Backton, Thomas Walsingham, and others. In the latter end of the reign of Edw. III. John de Crawden, prior of Ely, obtained it from that king, for his monks to study in, but afterwards exchanged it, with the lands thereto belonging, for the advowances of certain rectories, with William Bateman, born in the city of Norwich, and afterwards bishop of that place; he was a person well skilled in the civil and canon law, and was therefore employed by the king as ambassador to the pope, in which embassy he died at Avenion. The bishop obtained the king's licence or charter to erect his new possession into a college, in the year 1351, and 26th of that monarch's reign, appointing a master, 2 fellows, and 3 scholars, to be students in the civil and canon law, and 1 fellow to study divinity, and be chaplain to the college.

GONVIL, AND CAIUS COLLEGE.

THIS college was began to be built by Edmund de Gonvil (younger brother to Sir Nicholas de Gonvil, of Rushworth, knight), rector of Rushworth and Terrington, in Norfolk, where he had founded a college of canons, for whom Walter de Mamey obtained a licence or charter of king Edw. III. anno 1348, to incorporate his college: The foundation was commenced where the garden and tennis court of Bene't stand, which he dedicated to the Virgin Mary; but dying soon after, he left by well a large sum of money, to Dr. Bateman, bishop of Norwich, and founder of Trinity Hall, to finish and endow it. The bishop wishing to bring this new hall nearer to his own, transplanted it where it is now situated, and endowed it with lands and tenements. To this college he gave the name of Gonvil Hall, appointing a master, 4 fellows, and 2 scholars. About 200 years after, in the reign of queen Mary, John Caius, doctor of physick, son of Robert Caius, a Yorkshire-man, added a new court to this college, built the

the three gates of humility, honour, and virtue. (Which last is one of the best pieces of architecture in the kingdom), and endowed the college with the demesnes of Crokelly, in Rickmansworth, Herts; the manor of Bincombe, in Dorsetshire, with the advowson of the parsonages of Rungton and Burnhamthorpe, in Norfolk, and the manor of Swanfly, in Caxton, Cambs; and also doubly the number of fellows; lastly, he gave a new name to the college, calling it GONVIL, or CAIUS (but from corruption, more commonly called Keys) COLLEGE. Dr. Caius spent much of his time in the Italian universities, writing and translating many books; and after his return was made physician to queen Mary. He died in the year 1573, and lies buried in the chapel of his college, under a plain tomb, with this laconic epitaph,

KING'S COLLEGE.

IN 1441, Henry 6th built a finall college, in and about the places where Augustine's Hostel, God's House, and the Church of St. Nicholas formerly stood, which he dedicated to that saint, on whose day he was born, endowed it and appointed a rector, and 12 scholars. William Bingham, rector of St. John Lachary's, in London, founded a little hostel the following year contiguous to king Henry's college, to be governed by a proctor, and 25 scholars, all to be men studying the criticisms of grammar. The year 1443, king Henry with the full consent of Bingham, united and enlarged these two into one college, adding also the church of St. John Lachary, then belonging to Trinity Hall; in recompence for which, he gave to that hall the patronage of St. Edward's, in Cambridge, and founded the present college, which he called the college of the blessed Virgin Mary and the glorious confessor St. Nicholas, now universally known by the name of KING'S COLLEGE, appointing a provost, 70 fellows and scholars scholars, 3 chaplains, 6 clerks, 16 choristers, and a master over them, who is also the organist, 16 officers of the foundation, besides 12 servitors to the senior fellows, and 6 poor scholars; amounting in all to 160. For the erecting and founding this college, and that at Eton, near Windsor, Henry enfeoffed certain bishops and others, with lands and possessions, part of his inheritance of the duchy of Cornwall, to the value of near 3400*l.* per annum, declaring in his will how “the said money should be employed on the said two colleges.” It is almost unnecessary to add, that if the whole plan had been put into execution, and had been carried on in symmetry with the chapel, it would have exceeded any building of the kind at present known, and it appears evident, that the king’s intention was, that that should have been the case, but it was entirely obstructed by his immediate successor Edward, who attempted to check rather than forward the undertaking. We cannot take leave of King’s, without noticing the chapel of this college, although it will be foreign to our plan, as well as exceed our limits to enter into a particular detail of the beauties of this noble edifice; let it suffice therefore to observe, that it is justly esteemed the finest specimen of Gothic architecture perhaps at present in the world; the architect's name was Cloos: the structure, and particularly of the inner roof, is so exquisitely curious, that it is even said to have puzzled the great Sir Christopher Wren. The stone work is so geometrically contrived, that immense key-stones, each a ton weight, are suspended at equal distances from the middle of this roof, and support the whole. Henry 7th extended the building 188 feet in length, and finished the outside shell. Henry 8th finished the inside, erecting the stalls, adorning them with the excellent carving, and the windows with the painted glass.

that

QUEEN'S COLLEGE.

LADY Margaret of Anjou, daughter to René ~~les~~, titular king of Sicily and Jerusalem, and wife to Henry VI. founded this college, in a place formerly called Goose Green, dedicating it to St. Margaret and St. Bernard, and gave lands to the amount of 200l. appointing a President and four Fellows. The first stone was laid on the 15th of April, 1448. by Sir John Wenlock. Andrew Ducket, a friar, rector of St. Botolph's, in Cambridge, and principal of Bernard Hotel, was a considerable advancer of this foundation; in 1465, he prevailed upon queen Elizabeth, relict of Sir J. Grey, and wife to Edward IV. to perfect what queen Margaret had begun, who afterwards became so great a benefactress, that she is annually commemorated as a co-foundress of the college.

CATHERINE HALL.

ROBERT Woodlark, S. T. JESUS COLLEGE.

THIS college was formerly a Convent of Benedictine Nuns, founded, about the year 1133, in honor of the blessed Virgin Mary and St. Rhadegund, by Malcolm IV. the ninety-first king of Scotland, and Earl of Huntingdon and Cambridge, in the reign of king Stephen of England. This Rhadegund, daughter of Bertram, prince of Thuringia, was wife to Lotharius, king of France, (son to Clodovus the great, the first Christian king of that country;) she died in a small monastery in Poictou, thereby gaining the reputation of a Saint. This house falling much into decay, from the vicious habits and profligacy of the Nuns, it was dissolved by a charter from Henry VII. and Pope Julius II.; the house and lands were bestowed on John Alcock, twenty-eighth bishop of Ely, to convert into a college, in the year 1496, and twelfth of that king's reign, who dedicated it to Jesus, the Virgin Mary, and St. Rhadegund, and placed over it a master, six fellows, and as many scholars. This bishop, born at Beverley in Yorkshire, was a man of extraordinary learning and virtue. He also built a free school at Kingston-upon-Hull in Yorkshire.

CHRIST'S COLLEGE.

IN the year 1505, and twenty-first of Henry VII. the Lady Margaret, countess of Richmond and Derby, mother of that monarch and daughter of John Beaufort, duke of Somerset, and Margaret Beauchamp, born at Bletsoe in Bedfordshire, was the foundress of this college, on the site of a monastery, which was called God's house, founded by Henry VI. without Barnwell gate, opposite St. Andrew's church, after having obtained a license from her son Henry VII. altering the name from God's house to Christ's college. It had been the intention of Henry VI. to advance the scholars of God's house to sixty, which his sudden death prevented. Queen Margaret however, willing to put into execution the designs of Henry, completed the number, by plentifully endowing the college out of her own lands and possessions, that her revenues alone were sufficient to afford an easy subsistence for a master, twelve fellows, and forty-seven scholars, in all sixty. Henry VI. being the founder of God's house, on which this college was built, is commemorated as one of their founders. Edward VI. afterwards added another fellowship and three scholarships to this society.

to

ST. JOHN'S COLLEGE.

THE scite of this college was formerly that of a priory stiled the hospital of the prior and brethren of the order of St. John the Evangelist, according to the rule and institute of St. Augustin in the Jewry (a place so called from the Jews living there) which priory was founded by Nigellus, second bishop of Ely, and treasurer to Henry I. in the year 1134, who endowed it with a revenue of 140l. a year.

This college was founded by the Lady Margaret, the founder of Christ college, in the year 1509, and was endowed by her with lands, manors, and possessions of the yearly value of 400l. Her untimely death retarded the progress of her infant college which happen'd soon after its foundation, but by will she devised the aforesaid lands, together with the scite of the dissolved priory of St. Johns, with the revenue thereof, amounting to 80l. per annum, to her executors, executors, in trust for the building of this College; and they obtaining a charter bearing date 9th April, 1511, built a most beautiful College, and appointed Alan Percy, younger son of Henry Percy, fourth Earl of Northumberland its first Master, with 31 Fellows, giving them a set of statutes which they were sworn to obey.

MAGDALEN COLLEGE.

THE scite of this college was originally that of a priory dedicated to St. Giles, and afterwards became noted for the three famous monasteries, of Ely, Ramsey and Walden about the year 300. These houses were however purchased in 1519, by Edward Stafford, third duke of Buckingham, earl of Stafford, &c. &c. who united them into one college for the benefit of the University, naming the same Buckingham-hall. Afterwards, Thomas, Lord Baron Audley of Walden, Lord High Chancellor of England, and Privy Councillor of Henry VIII. in 1542, obtained of that king, a grant of this college, which society he incorporated by the name of the college of St. Mary Magdalen, vulgarly called Maudlen, and it has been supposed he fixed on this name, because, it will be observed, the word contains the founder's name, with the addition of a letter at either end :—He also endowed it with lands and tenements, (among which were parcels of the priory of the Holy Trinity in London,) for the maintenance of a Master, and four Fellows, which, by other benefactors, have since been increased to sixteen.

The heirs of Lord Audley of Walden are hereditary patrons of this colleges, the Mastership of which is at their disposal.

TRINITY COLLEGE.

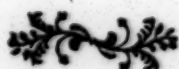

TRINITY COLLEGE the most elegant and magnificent in the university, was founded where formerly stood two colleges and an hostel.—1st. That of St. Michael the archangel, founded on the 25th of September 1324, by Henry Stanton, alias Stratton, canon of the churches of St. Peter at York, and St. Andrew at Wells. rector of East Dereham and Northcreek in Norfolk, and chancellor of the exchequer 17th Edward II. The yearly rents of this house then amounted to 144l. 13s. 1d. which was enriched with many possessions of John Ilney.

2d. King's Hall, founded by king Edward III. in the year 1376, and 51st of his reign, endowing it with large possessions, so that it was reckon'd the best landed foundation in the university; and 3d. Phiswick's hostel, an unendowed house, formerly the dwelling of William Phiswick, esquire beadle, which he had bestowed on Gonvill-hall, (in lieu thereof
Henry

Henry VIII. granted to that hall 3l. per annum,) and erected a small college in 1393, for receiving the students of that hall when too crowded.

Henry VII, made great additions to the revenues of these three societies, in the year 1546, taking them into his own hands, he founded one spacious college, dedicating it to the holy and undivided Trinity, and endowing it so largely that he left it with the yearly income of 1300l. for the maintenance of a Master, 60 Fellows, 40 Scholars, &c. &c. reserving at the same time for himself and his successors, the prerogative of appointing the Master.

Queen Mary built the beautiful chapel to this college, and added a revenue of 338l. a year, for the maintenance of 20 scholars, 10 Choristers, 4 Conducts, &c. &c.

EMANUEL COLLEGE.

IN the present situation of Emanuel college formerly stood a monastery of preaching friars, commonly called Black Friars, of the order of St. Dominick, founded and endowed in the year 1280, the reign of Edward I. by Alice, countess of Oxford, daughter and heiress of Gilbert Lord Sanford, hereditary lord chamberlain to the queen of England, and wife to Robert Vere fifth earl of Oxford.— After the suppression of monasteries it became the dwelling house of a Mr. Sherwood, from whom, it is supposed, sir Walter Mildmay, knt. fifth son of Thomas Mildmay of Chelmsford in Essex, chancellor of the dutchy of Lancaster, and Exchequer, privy counsellor to queen Elizabeth, in the 26th year of her reign, purchased the same and founded the present society by the name of Emanuel College, obtaining a license or charter of incorporation for that purpose, pose, which he endowed for the maintenance of a master, 3 fellows, and 4 scholars. To this number were afterwards added 11 fellowships, partly by the founder's liberality, and partly by that of other benefactors, as also 50 scholarships, and 10 poor scholarships.

SYDNEY SUSSEX COLLEGE.

ON the scite of a monastery of Franciscans, commonly called Grey Friars, built by king Edward I. this college was erected ; a monastery famous for having been the place where the public exercises and annual assemblies of the university were held, which was adopted for these purposes, on account of its convenient size. Lady Frances Sydney, countess of Suffex, relict of Thomas Ratcliffe, third earl of Suffex and daughter of sir William Sydney, dying on the 9th of March 1588, without issue, by her last will left 5000l. to her executors for the foundation of a college, to be called after her name, the college of the lady Francis Sydney Suffex.—Her executors procured for this end a mortmain from queen Elizabeth, and purchased a parcel of ground and some old buildings, formerly the said monastery of Franciscans, of Trinity college, on which they founded

ed

ed this new college, in pursuance to the will and directions of the founder, and endowed it with revenues for the maintenance of a master, 10 fellows, and 20 scholars; but finding, after the college and other expences were known, the remainder of her legacy would not be a sufficient maintenance for so many fellows, they reduced the number of fellowships to seven.

He also ordained that it should be printed, and the expence deducted from the product of the estate.

Some useful Account of the Fellowships, Scholarships, &c. belonging to the different Colleges.

PETER-HOUSE COLLEGE.

AT this college there are 22 fellows, 14 of which are on the foundation, the remainder are bye-fellows, who as such are eligible to no one office in the college, and are perfectly distinct from those on the foundation. The foundation fellowships are appropriated to North and South candidates, and if there are already two of a country, a vacancy must happen before another person can be elected. With respect to the scholarships at this college, the number is variable, as the society can at pleasure (according to the state of their revenue) increase or diminish the number. The best scholarships here are not worth more than 13*l.* per ann. which being paid weekly, and according to residence, must necessarily be of little advantage. There are no scholarships appropriated here, except a few, which are in the patronage of lord Melbourne. There is a librarian, whose salary is 16*l.* per ann. This office is always given to a sizar of the college.

CLARE HALL.

IS endowed with 20 fellowships, open to all counties, with this only restriction, that there cannot be more than 2 fellows of any one county. 10 of these are called senior, 7 junior, and 3 bye-fellowships; the 10 senior are denominated foundation fellowships; and of the 7 junior fellowships, 3 were founded by Thomas Cecil, earl of Exeter, 2 by Mr. Freeman, and 2 by Mr. Diggins.

There are several good scholarships, whose founders and value are as follow :

PEMBROKE

PEMBROKE HALL.

THE fellowships in this college, 15 in number, are open to all counties, but the succession is very slow, as on an average there are not more than two livings vacant in the course of three years.

There are several scholarships belonging to the society, which in point of value are inconsiderable, being worth only from 5 to 10*l.* per ann. Besides which there are five or six, founded by one Parkins, a citizen of London, to be given to men educated at Merchant Taylor's school. He was himself of that school, and stood for election at St. John's college, Oxford: but being superannuated, and on that account ineligible, he bequeathed a sum of money to found these scholarships, which were to be given to those who came from Merchant Taylor's school superannuated. The value of each is 30*l.* per ann. and may be held seven years. The scholar's ought to reside thirty-nine weeks, but the college dispense with nine weeks of that residence, in consideration of their forfeiting four guineas and a half, or half a guinea for every week they may be absent. These scholar's are looked upon with an unfavourable eye by the society, in proof of which it has been remarked, that of late years only one has been elected to a foundation scholarship, which circumstance is an insuperable barrier to their ever being elected fellows of the college. Parkins also founded a scholarship to be given away to a student of this college, who shall have had his education at Bowes school in Yorkshire.

There is another scholarship of 36l. per ann. left by an old lady, for a superannuated Merchant Taylor's man: to hold which no residence is required*.

Dr. Long, late master of the college, erected a wooden sphere, and ordered that the keeper of the key should be allowed 10l. per ann. which is always bestowed upon an undergraduate.

* The same person founded one similar to this at St. John's college, Oxford: which is now increased to about 50l. per ann. though that at Pembroke has remained of the same value as at its foundation.

BENNE'T COLLEGE.

AT the foundation of this college, 2 fellowships only were founded: 6 more were added at different times by Sir John Cambridge, Henry Fangmore, and others. Archbishop Parker increased the number by 2, which he appropriated to the city of Norwich, and also desired the society to found 2 others. All the fellowships are open to any county, except the 2 Norwich ones.

The master and fellows founded the first scholarship in the year 1457, his office was to read out of the Bible in the hall, assist in singing mass, and wait on the fellows table; for which he had his commons, with a manciple during their pleasure.

1489. Richard Bocher, B. D. and fellow, left by will 40 shillings for a scholar who should be skilled in grammar and the arts. The appointment in the master and fellows, within a month or two after a vacancy. His office was to read the Bible at dinner.

1495. The society founded a scholarship, which, out of gratitude to the Duchess of Norfolk, was called after her name. Qualifications, stipend and exercises the same as Bocher's.

1525. John Sayntwary, and James Curson, founded another similar to the last.

1548. The society founded 6 poor scholarships, the salary 8d. per week each, but afterwards increased to 12d. with a small allowance for laundress and barber. The vacancies were to be filled up within three months, out of those completely learned in grammar, who were to proceed in arts, and after study divinity. Upon these conditions they might retain them for six years, otherwise only for three. They were not to be absent from college above a month in the year, without permission.

1569. John Mere, esq. beadle, founded a scholarship, to be called after his own name, and appropriated it to the county of Cambridge; allowance and treatment to be the same as others. Election within a month after a vacancy.

1567. Archbishop Parker founded 3 Norwich scholarships. The appointment in the power of the mayor and aldermen, from the schools in that city, or in Aylsham, Norfolk. The scholars must be under the age of 20, at the time of their election, well instructed in grammar, &c. and born in the city of Norwich. They are to enjoy their exhibition six years if they take orders; otherwise only three. Notice to be given of a vacancy within two weeks, and to be filled up within within four more. To be absent no more than a month in a year, and that with permission.

1569. Archbishop Parker founded 2 more, with the same restrictions. These five scholars were assigned rooms and 12d. a week for their commons. They are likewise to be taught free by the Norwich fellows, who, on this condition, have a right to hold prebends with their fellowships.

The same archbishop provided for 3 other scholars, out of some tenements in Westminster, then rented at 8l. 13s. 4d. to be called Canterbury scholars. They are nominated by the dean and chapter of that church from their free school, and to be such tenant's sons, in Norfolk, Suffolk, and Lincolnshire, as they are obliged to support there. But if none are sent to college after three weeks notice of a vacancy, the dean and chapter of Westminster are to send one from their school, which, if they fail to do, they forfeit their turn, and the society elect one, after three weeks, from any school in the province of Canterbury. He at the same time ordered the master of the hospital at Eastbridge in the city of Canterbury, to pay 6l. 13s. 4d. for the maintenance of 2 scholars, whom he, with the dean of that church, was to nominate from the king's school in that city. The candidates to be born in Kent; the college to give six weeks notice of a vacancy. He also appointed a registrar by indenture, to be elected by the corporation of Norwich. He is to be well skilled in writing, and to be called the senior bible-clerk, to take down transcripts from manuscripts, and wait on the fellows.

1580. John Parker, esq. founded 3 scholarships out of an annuity of 10l. from his estate at Lambeth. The nomination he reserved to himself, but one after his death was to devolve on the archbishop (and, during a vacancy, on the society) who had the sole choice of the other two. One was to be chosen from Canterbury school, born in the city; another from Aylsham, and born there; the third, in like manner, from Wymondham. The qualifications, &c. are the same as the Norwich scholars. But if none are so qualified, or if the archbishop should neglect to nominate within 30 days after notice of a vacancy, he then forfeits his turn, and the society elect from the dioceses of Canterbury or Norwich.

1577. Sir Nicholas Bacon, settled upon the college an annuity of 20l. per ann. for the maintenance of six scholars, to be chosen from the grammar school at Redgrave in Norfolk, in the following manner: The society are to give 14 days notice of a vacancy, and a person is to be chosen by his (Sir N. B's) heirs male, who is to be elected and sent to college 10 days after the election. They are to be allowed 1s. 2d. per week week for commons, to be treated like other scholars, and are eligible with them into any of the eight common fellowships. From these scholars, he obliges his heirs at law to choose the school-master of Redgrave, which practise is now very much neglected.

1595. Roger Manners, esq. made provision for the support of 4 poor scholars, out of the rectory of East-Chinach in Somersetshire; three to be allowed 16d. a week for commons, during residence; to be chosen by the society within 40 days after a vacancy. The fourth, called a bizar, to have 10d. a week, and to be nominated by the master alone. They are all to enjoy like privileges with the other scholars.

1618. Mrs. Alice Caston gave, by will, an annuity of 18l. for founding 3 scholarships, to which she ordered those of the names of Caston, Clenche, Brownrig and Amfield should be preferred to others, to be allowed 2s. 3d $\frac{1}{2}$. a week, and to be treated as other scholars.

1636. Mr. John Borage gave, by will, an annuity of 5l. for the maintenance of a scholar, of the county of Norfolk, and of his own name and kindred; to hold it until he becomes a fellow, or master of arts. But if no such a one can be found in the university, the society choose one out of Norwich or Norfolk, from any college, and if not so qualified, the annuity is to be forfeited and revert to his posterity.

1659. Mr. Coleman gave, by will, an annuity of 20l. for the support of 4 scholars; two from the free school in Norwich, and two from that of Wymondham, after the rate of 5l. each, during their residence, till they become bachelors of arts. But if one or more of his surname (from what school soever they may come) be fit for a student, and shall abide in the college, the whole to be paid to him or them equally, till they become fellows or masters of arts. In which case the scholarships are instantly vacated, however they may have been before disposed of. The annuity, is payable in the hall of the college, on St. John's and Christmas-day.

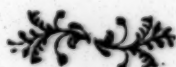

1677. Archbishop Sterne gave an annuity of 20l. to provide for 2 scholars, who are allowed 10l. a year each, during their residence. The society are to choose one out of the city of York, and another out of the town of Mansfield, to have been born at those places. But after a vacancy of 12 weeks, if none such can be found, it may then be supplied by a person born in the diocese of York, and not otherwise.

1693. Dr. Spencer founded a scholarship, of which the master has the sole nomination; to be called the master's scholar, and to have 10l. per ann. so long as his good behaviour is approved of by the master.

1700. Mr. Samuel Chapman gave 60l. by will, to purchase lands, the profits of which to be disposed of for the maintenance of 2 poor scholars, after the rate of 1s. a week each. The chapel clerk and janitor to be preferred to others; to be called Hebrew exhibitions; and those who hold them are once a quarter, to carry up to the Hebrew lecturer a chapter or psalm out of the Hebrew bible, explained grammatically, or after a third failure, to forfeit their exhibitions. He also founded another scholarship, to be given to one skilful in the Hebrew tongue, and preference to be given to the chapel clerk and janitor. The salary 50l. per ann. it was to be called the bachelor's exhibition, because it was intended to assist him in taking that degree.

TRINITY HALL

AT this college there are 12 fellowships, 10 of which may be held by laymen; the other 2 as they qualify the possessors to retire to college livings, are called divinity fellowships. The lay fellowships are held by those who have taken their degrees in law; the succession is very slow, for it is held so honourable to be a lay-fellow at this college, that few who may have been so fortunate as to be elected, are willing to resign so desirable a post. There is no preference to be given to counties in the choice of a fellow, but the foundation here is different from all others, in as much as no fellowship can be held with a living though it be of ever so inconsiderable a value.

The scholarships here are very trifling in point of emolument, but a member must have been a scholar to become qualified to offer himself a candidate for a fellowship. There is one scholarship to which is annexed the office of librarian, which is very lucrative, and is always given to a liar.

GONVIL, OR CAIUS COLLEGE.

IN this college are 29 fellowships: 12 are called senior fellowships, of the original charter; of these, 3 are of the old foundation, open to all counties, and also to laymen; 3 founded by Dr. Caius, to be possessed by Norfolk men, two of whom must be physicians; and the remaining 6, all by different founders, 2 confined to the Norwich diocese, and the other 4 open to all counties; 1 of the 6 is open to laymen.—Eight are usually termed junior fellowships, open to all counties and likewise to laymen, except 1, which must be held by a priest born in the Norwich diocese: From these 8, the senior fellows are elected. And 9 commonly called bye-fellowships; 6 founded by Dr. Perse, open to all counties and to laymen, and the remaining 3 by Mr. Wortley, which require nine months residence, or absence beyond the seas. There are also 77 scholarships, many of whom are confined to the Norwich diocese; and about 15 exhibitions, of different values, which are given to the scholars ad libitum.

KING'S COLLEGE.

THIS foundation, exclusive of priests and subordinate officers, consists of a provost 70 fellows and scholars; the latter to be supplied, by regular succession, from Eton college, which, as we have already observed, was founded and endowed by King Henry VI. about the same time with this college: The time of election of scholars into the royal foundation of Eton college is about the end of July or beginning of August, at the appointment of the two societies; on the vacancy of fellowships at King's college, they are elected to that foundation, and after the expiration of three years from the day of their admission, are chosen fellows. King's college has peculiar privileges; the provost and fellows have absolute authority within the walls of the college, and are not subject to the jurisdiction of the university; and its undergraduates are exempt from the power of the proctors and other university officers, neither do they keep any public exercises in the schools, or are any way examined for their bachelor of arts' degree; and also have the singular advantage of wearing hats with their gowns as soon as they commence bachelors of arts, a privilege only allowed to the masters of arts of the university, noblemen, and those fellow-commoners who are baronets or sons of baronets.

QUEEN'S

QUEEN'S COLLEGE.

WHEN the Lady Margaret founded this college, she appointed a president and 4 fellows. The following benefactors each founded a fellowship:

John Mark	John Green
Lady Jane Burrough	John Alfey
John Collinson	John Wiat.

John Drewell, canon of St. Paul's, London, also founded two, and John Darby one, fellowship. The 5 senior divine's fellowships were founded by Lady Margery Ross. In the whole there are 19, what are called foundation fellowships, (2 of which are appropriated to the county of York,) beside 1 bye-fellowship. The restriction in the choice of the rest of the fellows is, that there can be but one of a county, except where they have estates; though they frequently have a dispensation from the king to elect one fellow more from any county. There are also 45 scholarships and 8 exhibitions, the particulars of which we cannot at present state with accuracy.

CATHARINE HALL.

THE fellowships at this college are 14 in number; six of them are of the original college foundation; six give a preference to those born in Yorkshire, and in failure of them to men born in the county of Lincoln; one is appropriated to Coventry school; and one is annexed to the office of chaplain or conduct; three others are called bye-fellowships. There are besides 50 scholarships and exhibitions: which (ten excepted) are all open to men of any county. These ten founded by Mrs. Mary Ramlden, of Norton, Yorkshire, (who likewise founded the six Yorkshire fellowships) give in like manner a preference to Yorkshire men, and next to candidates born in the county of Lincoln.

JESUS COLLEGE.

THE number of foundation fellowships at this college is only 6, but it has since been increased by different benefactors to 16, one of which was founded by John Royston, master of the college: The restriction here is, that eight shall be held by persons born in counties North, and eight by those born in counties South of the Trent.—The election of fellows in this college is somewhat peculiar, as the sole appointment is not vested in the hands of the society: On every vacancy the fellows nominate two candidates, and the bishop of Ely elects one of them; but there is one fellowship to which the bishop has an exclusive right both to nominate and appoint.

THE FOLLOWING IS A LIST OF THE NAMES, STIPENDS, AND APPROPRIATION

CHRIST COLLEGE.

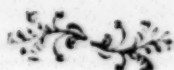

AT this college there are 15 fellowships: 12 of which were founded by Lady Margaret, mother of King Henry VII. and are open to all counties, but with this restriction, there cannot be more than one fellow of a county at the same time, except Yorkshire, where there may be two; the holders of these 12 foundation fellowships must take orders within four months after their election, provided their age will admit of it, if not, within four months after they have attained that age. King Edward VI. added another fellowship, and two more were afterwards founded, one by Sir John Finch, the other by Sir Thomas Baines:—Those who can prove relationship to the founders of the two latter, have a prior claim, nor is it necessary they should take holy orders. Lady Margaret also founded 47 scholarships, no more than three of which can be possessed by men of the same county at the same time. King Edward founded 3 others, and Sir John Finch and Sir Thomas Baines afterwards added 1 each. Those founded by Lady Margaret and King Edward are worth about seven shillings per week, the other 2 are of the yearly value of 12l. Besides the above, there were feveral founded by different benefactors, concerning which we annex the following particulars : Dr. Thomas Plume, archdeacon of Rochester, bequeathed 100*l.* to found a scholarship, which was to be given to a person educated either at Brentwood, Malden or Chelmsford schools; it is at present worth 6*l.* per ann.—John Hervy of Thury in Bedfordshire, gave 150*l.* to found a scholarship, to be held by a person born in that county.—The Rev. Christopher Clarke, archdeacon of Norwich and prebend of Ely, laid out 300*l.* to purchase an estate, 10*l.* per ann. of the income of which estate, to be applied to the founding of a scholarship, the possessor of which must be a Norfolk man; the remainder to go to the college.—The same Christopher Tancred, esq. who founded 4 divinity studentships, of which we have before given an account, left a house in Newmarket, the rent of which to be laid out for the maintenance of a scholar, and a man born at Newmarket to have the preference; it is now worth 12*l.* per ann.—Sir William Pettyt left 200*l.* to be laid out for the benefit of two poor scholars of Skipton school; and Mr. Sylvestor Pettyt, his brother, left 20*l.* per ann. to augment the above.—Dr. Sethward, bishop of Salisbury, founded 4 scholarships of 12*l.* per ann. each.—Mr. Thomas Wilson gave to the college 3 exhibitions of 5*l.* per ann. each for 3 scholars educated at Kirby Lonsdale school in Lancashire.

—Mr. Robert Broadbank founded a scholarship, for a man born in the town of Huntingdon.—Mr. Richard Risley founded a scholarship of 10l. per ann. for a scholar brought up at Upton school.—Mr. Bunting founded 3 scholarships.—Mr. Carr founded 6 scholarships for men educated at Giggleswick school.

ST. JOHN'S COLLEGE.

THE number of original foundation fellowships, (or those founded by Lady Margaret) at this college is 32, and the only restriction is, that there cannot be more than two at the same time held by men born in the same county. There are also 21 founded by different benefactors; which are intitled to the same privileges as those of the original foundation, and are as follow :

Besides the above there are a considerable number of less annual value, to enumerate which it is hardly necessary.

THE number of Scholarships here is very considerable, amounting in all to 114, 27 of which were founded by Lady Margaret, and are open to all Counties; 70 by different Benefactors, open also to all Counties, and 8 by Mr. Platt, which, like the Fellowships he founded, may be held by Candidates of any County.

The Dukes of Somerset founded 9, which are appropriated to men educated at Manchester, Hereford, or Marlborough schools.

MAGDALEN COLLEGE.

AT this college there are only 4 foundation fellowships, which number has since been increased to 16 by different benefactors, viz.

There is also a travelling fellowship, worth 200l. a year, which is only tenable for a limited number of years, and is appropriated to the county of Norfolk.—The fellowships in general are open to all counties.—There are several valuable scholarships, which, except two or three, appropriated to Shropshire, and one or two to the county of Norfolk, are open to candidates of any description.—The following are the names of their respective founders:

EMANUEL COLLEGE.

THE number of fellows upon the foundation at this college is 13, to become a candidate it is not necessary to be of any particular county. But there is this one restriction, there cannot be more than one fellow of the same county, at the same time: Besides the foundation fellowships there are 2 founded by Sir Wolston Dixie, but the possessors of these have no vote in any college affairs, nor can they retire to any livings belonging to the college. To be elected a Dixie fellow, it is requisite that you either prove yourself related to that family, or that you have had your education at Market Bosworth school, in Leicestershire.

The scholarships upon the foundation are open also to all counties, but restricted to three of the same county at the same time: besides which there are scholarships and exhibitions to the number of thirty-eight, which require regularly keeping terms; and if you are absent half a year they become vacant. The scholarships and exhibitions were founded as follows:

Two scholarships by Sir W. Dixie.

Two do. - - Dr. Branthwaite.

Two Greek do. - John Browne, B. D.

Four exhibitions - Lady Grace Mildmay.

Four do. - - Dr. Whichcot.

Ten do. - - F. Ashe, Esqr.

Two - - Mr. Hobbs

Four - - Mr. Robert Johnson.

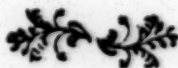

Two - - Mrs. Anne Hunt.

Two - - Mr. Walter Richards.

One - - Mr. Wells.

One - - N. Aspinall.

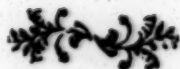

Dr. Thorpe also founded 5 exhibitions of the value of 14*l.* per ann. each: To hold which six months residence is required, beginning at Michaelmas.

SYDNEY-SUSSEX COLLEGE.

AT this college there are 9 foundation fellowships and 20 scholarships, all of which are open to the natives of any part of his majesty's dominions. There are besides the above, two scholarships appropriated to persons born at Tiverton: and two exhibitions, in the disposal of which, preference is to be given to candidates from Oxham and Grantham schools: Also two exhibitions of 12l. per ann. each, confined to clergymen's orphans or sons.

UNIVERSITY OFFICERS.

THE CHANCELLOR.—The origin of this officer we can find no account of, but probably it is as ancient as the university itself, as we observe mention made of him in some of the oldest records and papers:—The office was originally annual, and continued so until the year 1504; but the university finding it troublesome to choose a new chancellor, and having this year pitched on a person well qualified for the place, viz. John Fisher, bishop of Rochester, continued him in the office for life, and which was in the year 1514 more solemnly confirmed by them: at present the chancellor does not hold his office durante vita, but may be elected every three years, or continued longer by the tacit consent of the university; when it became triennial we know not. Before the election of a vice-chancellor, the chancellor was a doctor, who resided in the university, and did the whole duty himself. The chancellor seals the diplomas or letters of degrees, provision, &c. given in the university. He is to govern the university, being its first magistrate, to preserve and defend its rights and privileges, to convoke assemblies, and do justice among the members under his jurisdiction. He is now generally one of the first nobility :—The first person of honor who was chancellor was Eudo de Zouch, son of Lord Zouch of Haringworth in Northamptonshire, descended from the most ancient barons at Ashby-de-la-Zouch in Leicestershire, elected in the year 1396, and 20 of Richard II. The chancellor's court enjoys the sole jurisdiction, in exclusion of the king's court, over all civil actions and suits whatsoever, where a scholar or privileged person is one of the parties, excepting in such cases where the right of freehold is concerned : And there, by the university charter, they are at liberty to try and determine, either according to the common law of the land, or according to their own local customs, at discretion.

HIGH STEWARD.

This officer is chosen by the senate, and holds his office by patent from the university ; his business is to assist the chancellor and other officers, when required, in the execution of their offices ; and to hear and determine capital causes, according to the laws of the land, and the privileges of the university.

VICE-

VICE-CHANCELLOR.

When those elected chancellors were persons of noble birth or great employment, whose occupations often required their absence, vice-chancellors were nominated in their room to hold the office and execute their power. Henry Stockton was the first vice-chancellor, chosen in the year 1417, and 5th of Henry V. during the chancellorship of John de Rickendale, afterwards bishop of Chichester. They are chosen yearly on the 4th of November, by the body of the university, out of two persons nominated by the heads of the several colleges and halls. In the year 1587, Dr. Capcott was chosen vice-chancellor while he was only a fellow of Trinity college, but an act was made at this time, and still continues, that "for the time to come, none but heads of houses should be chosen vice-chancellors." He also must be in holy orders. His proper office is to execute the chancellor's power, to govern the university according to her statutes, to see that officers and students do their duty, that courts be duly called, and to manage all business in the absence of the chancellor.

COMMISSARY.

The commissary is an officer under the chancellor, (much the same as a recorder is to a mayor or the chancellor of a diocese to a bishop;) he is an assistant or assessor to the vice-chancellor in his court:—He also holds a court of record for all privileged persons and scholars under the degree of master of arts, where all causes are tried and determined by the civil and statute law, and by the custom of the university.

PROCTORS.

Are two officers chosen annually from the students, on the 10th of October, who must be masters of arts.—Their office is to attend to the discipline and behaviour of the undergraduates and bachelors, to keep good order in the university, to assist in the business of the schools, and see the exercises daily and regularly performed, read the graces, attend at taking up degrees, and take the votes in the white-hood-house, and lastly punish all violaters of the statutes of the university.

TAXORS.

The taxatores, taxers or taxors in this university, so called from taxing, prizing or rating the rents of houses, were first appointed to regulate the price of the lodgings of the students, the exorbitant charges of the townsmen rendering an interposition absolutely necessary, and the students weary with their exactions, had threatened to seek for a place where they might be accommodated on more reasonable terms; and as colleges and halls were not as yet in existence, no alternative would have remained.

They are chosen in like manner and at the same time with the proctors: they are clerks of the market, have cognizance of weights and overlook the gage of measures, especially such as concern the diet of the students.

MODERATORS.

Are appointed and paid by the proctors; acting as their substitutes and assistants — They superintend the exercises and disputations of the questionists in philosophy, and the examinations previous to the degree of bachelor of arts.

SCRUTATORS.

Their office is only to read the graces and take notes of the black-hood house, to which they always belong.

THE PUBLIC ORATOR.

Is the voice of the university on all public occasions, writes their letters, presents noblemen to their degrees, &c. &c. There are also two LIBRARIANS, a REGISTRAR, and three ESQUIRE BEADLES, &c. all of which are chosen by the senate.

THE CAPUT.

The vice-chancellor, a doctor of divinity, a doctor of laws, a doctor of physic, a regent master of arts, and a non-regent master of arts, form the caput. They are to consider and determine what graces are proper to be brought before the university, and each member has a negative voice. The caput are elected in the following manner: On the 12th of October, the vice-chancellor, heads of colleges, (or their representatives) doctors in divinity, law, and physic, the proctors, and the scrutators, meet in the senate-house at one o'clock in the afternoon. The vice-chancellor writes down five names, viz. a doctor of divinity, a doctor of laws, a doctor of physic, a non-regent master of arts, and a regent master of arts; each of the proctors write down also five other names; and out of these 15, the vice-chancellor, heads, doctors, and scrutators elect 5. It has been usual to elect those whom the vice-chancellor has nominated. Each person is to elect one of the three nominated for each faculty. If there be an equality of votes for one or more of any faculty, the election of the persons belongs to the vice-chancellor and the two proctors present, or the majority of them, of which the vice-chancellor must be one. No grace can be offered to the senate, as we have already observed, which has not been unanimously approved of by the caput, any member of which may reject it, without assigning any reason for his conduct.

THE SENATE.

The members of the senate consist of all the doctors and masters of arts in the university, who have their names on the boards of their college: They decide all matters respecting the univer-by vote. The masters of arts are divided into two houses: 1st. The regents or white hoods, who are those who have not been A. M. 3 years, and who sit on the west end of the senate-house, next to the vice-chancellor's chair, which is called the regent's house. 2d. The non-regents or black hoods, those who have taken their master of art's degree 3 years or upwards, until they take a doctor's degree in any faculty. The non-regent's house is at the lower or east end of the senate house. All doctors have a right of voting in which house they please, upon every question; and either house is competent to reject a question. Some questions are determined by the body collective, as the choice of members of parliament.
